Yale's Russian Chorus in Debut Here

THE YALE Russian Chorus will make its Washington debut Sunday afternoon, April 24, presenting a choral program in Russian under the direction of its founder and only conductor, Dennis Mickiewicz.

The performance is being presented at Lisner Auditorium under the auspices of the Yale Club of Washington. Norman S. Paul is chairman.

Since its creation in 1953, the Yale Russian Chorus has interpreted the Russian and Soviet culture to the American public through the presentation of Russian songs—liturgical, folk and classical.

The chorus has also traveled extensively in Russia during the past summers and has had an opportunity to interpret American values to the people of the Soviet Union.

Kenley R. Dove is president of the Yale Russian Chorus with a membership of some 30 men who are undergraduates and graduate students at Yale.

Former Secretary of State Dean Acheson and Mrs. Acheson, the President's Adviser on Soviet Affairs Charles Bohlen and Mrs. Bohlen and Sen. and Mrs. Stuart Symington are among those sponsoring the concert.

The committee for the Yale Club of Washington includes Jonathan Sloat, David Bird, Capt. Milton Brush, Frederick Pelzman, Heyward Isham and Gilbert Grosvenor.

Tickets are available through Henry K. Willard II at the American Security & Trust Co.
